The evil unvaccinated are the evil

At the latest after the MPK with Merkel two days ago, we now know that all those who have not been vaccinated are the nation's lover, who you want to get vaccinated with thumbscrews and restrictions of all kinds. Yesterday evening at Maischberger The week our well-known health TV hero Mr. Lauterbach was our guest again. And once again he left off interesting things that I want to bring to the best of my knowledge here. Already at the beginning of Ms. Maischberger a top question, why he had talked the day before about the fact that the PCR test should be used as a safety notice and then tweeted by him a day later, no, the rapid antigen test would be an absolutely reliable one Test in terms of recognition of the India variant. His answer: Science is always in flux and he reads a lot of studies. Oh, Mr. Lauterbach is now reading studies overnight. And obviously there must be a multitude of studies that speak against each other, and depending on which one he is reading, he publishes the findings of the last study he read. So that's it. But there is still more. When asked about the regulations regarding the unvaccinated, he explains to my astonishment: Vaccinated people are more difficult to get infected with the India variant, for example, but if they are infected, they pass the virus on and are just as contagious as unvaccinated people. Oh, that means that vaccinated people are not tested, are not placed in quarantine, and do not need a test. If there are 100 unvaccinated people who all have a negative test, plus 50 vaccinated people, only one of whom has the India variant, which nobody knows because nobody has checked it, there is a high probability that some or many unvaccinated people are infected, and that's why they have it still to blame for it. That is the current situation. You have to understand that first and also the statement of Mr. Lauterbach, who expects to have only 2 groups of people by the end of 2022 at the latest: One is fully vaccinated, the other is the group of those who have recovered. Because, in his opinion, everyone will gradually become infected and go through the disease. Attention, pay attention to it, Mr. Lauterbach's remarks often begin with: We now know ... or we can assess ... well. Whenever he uses one of these or similar parts of the starting sentence, he has certainly read a study the day before, I now firmly believe.

Meanwhile, Prof. Streeck speaks up again. In an interview he made it clear that the vaccine was developed for self-protection, not as external protection. And before a difficult course. Many citizens already have problems with terminology. Herd immunity will not be achieved with this vaccine. Should Ms. Merkel finally make use of the terminology that is still talking about it. The vaccinated do not protect the unvaccinated. That's right, it's the other way around. The vaccinated put the unvaccinated at risk. He also makes it clear that viruses are being found in the throat of more and more people who have been vaccinated. It is clear, some have understood. Therefore, there are always new infections that come from vaccinated people. The protection of the vaccine is a little overestimated. I don't think so, but rather that the vaccine is massively overrated.

Mr Söder is making the best comment these days, and he is still pretending that everything was so clear from the start, so you can kidnap citizens easily and quickly. Because the citizens who did not know that simply did not listen properly to the many statements about vaccination. What did Mr Söder say that was so exciting? And it was really exciting and revealing at the same time, a shame for the entire federal government and Spahn. His statement: "We won't have to be fully vaccinated just once. I think we all agree that the process of vaccination must go longer, must go several times, must go several years in order to have a vaccination success. So nobody should believe now, two pricks and that's it. Vaccination will become part of everyday life for the next few years. "I think that's great, then everyone at least has a chance to get one of the side effects from the wide range. Have lots of fun with it. The saying of those who are currently 2-fold vaccinated: I am fully vaccinated, then it will probably be okay.

I understand, because the state is no longer protecting the population, especially those who have not been vaccinated, but instead consciously lets the groups come together to pass the infection on to people who have not been vaccinated. Fatalities are factored in. And this although Lauterbach clearly says that since the appearance of the India variant there will never be herd immunity because the possibility of infection cannot be ruled out with previous vaccines. Great prospects for the future.

I'll get to the point with a question? Which group is more dangerous? 100 vaccinated persons with double vaccination or 100 unvaccinated persons with negative antigen - rapid test. The vaccinated, of course, because nobody knows how much the virus carries in them to spread; in any case, the unvaccinated are clean. But not everyone understands that, not even 1. FC Köln, because they only want to allow those who have recovered or been vaccinated to play live. Well, let's go. The football clubs should rather sweep in front of their own door instead of blaming and sanctioning others. Corona cases again at a Bundesliga club. FSV Mainz 05 offers 3 corona infected people and has to put 14 players in quarantine. Stupid if you just can't stick to the rules, you are something special as a Bundesliga footballer. That's right, highly paid.

In the great wave of vaccination security, however, the incomprehensible news trickles through again and again that millions of people who have already been vaccinated twice will receive the 3rd vaccination as early as September 2021. Sounds a lot more harmless than the first two, the booster vaccination. But you can also tell the truth, the effect of the vaccinations decreases after a few months and you have to vaccinate again. Who knows how often and how long this will happen. In this respect, I wonder how it can be that a company develops a vaccine within a good six months that nobody actually expected last year. It is then approved by emergency approval and gives the company full coffers and the managing directors as well, plus there is the Federal Cross of Merit for a vaccine that is only partially effective, and to date the vaccine does not seem to have been improved, because it does not work any longer or permanently, it still has fewer side effects. Why the cash register rings for so long. The headline that Biontech has made a profit of 2 billion euros and thus contributes 0.5% of German economic growth only seems to be kind of great for the time being. Certainly for Biontech, and for the owners too, for the economy this doesn't matter at all, because Germany doesn't participate, because money from the huge amount of aid at the beginning doesn't flow back to the state, these were generous gifts. From the taxpayers, of course. I also ask myself why vaccination centers across Germany are actually being closed when the third wave of vaccinations is about to begin.

Just a few days ago, Ms. Merkel announced the poor vaccination rates in a flowery report, brought her target numbers and at the same time shook her rod at anyone who simply does not want to be vaccinated for good reasons. She doesn't care about the reasons, the main thing is that the quota is right. And now that. The RKI may have always published wrong numbers, the rate may be much higher. DIM, a digital vaccination monitoring system, is responsible for delivering the numbers. I save how it works, the only thing the RKI has to say is that there is a certain uncertainty about the vaccination dates. Thanks, that's enough for me. I call it crap, but we know that from other areas that have to do with Corona.

In any case, from 23 August each federal state can interpret the guidelines from the MPK for itself and introduce its own interpretations. We have federalism. And that's where Baden Württemberg starts right away, an incidence value no longer appears in its regulations. There is no longer a 7 - day incidence, anyone can do anything, provided that the refusal group has a negative test in special areas from August 16, the others are free. Lower Saxony has also already declared that there will be changes here from August 26th. There should no longer be any graduation of measures according to incidence, but simply the rule: If the incidence value reaches level 35 or more, certain access barriers apply to unvaccinated and untested persons for areas that you want to define by then.

Precise information from the City of Göttingen press office in a current corona case, precisely 6 corona cases. They come from a group of 9 and somehow got infected on their trip. So how old these people are, for reasons of data protection, the press office cannot say who and whether which were vaccinated, unfortunately, how they are currently doing - no, that is not possible either, and when and why they were infected, that also remains Secret. But why the press office reported it at all because of lack of content - it is also not known. Neither do I.

In the meantime, news about the contracts concluded by the federal government with Biontech / Pfizer have surfaced again on some channels. These should be equipped with toggle passages and still have been recognized by the federal government in this version. On the one hand, it is about the effectiveness, the side effects and possible harm that could result from these points. The passages clearly state that the buyer, i.e. the federal government, is buying a vaccine about which neither long-term effects nor efficacy is known, nor any data about such undesirable effects as it is called in the contract. Great, so the pig in a poke. It goes on. The federal government declares that it will indemnify Biontech / Pfizer and all companies associated with its manufacture from possible lawsuits, claims, claims, losses and damages, liabilities, severance payments, punishments blah blah blah, defend them and hold them harmless. The Ministry of Justice had obviously closed for several days and Lamprecht, well, I won't say anything about that.

Finally, a little anecdote in which Mr. Lauterbach plays the main role. We know it's an election campaign, and there are also various election campaign stands from the SPD. And every now and then you also meet the party's top candidate to be elected. As in his constituency 101 Leverkusen and Cologne Mülheim. Unfortunately, I can't see where it was taken from the photo available to me, but you can clearly see 3 men with face masks who are obviously distributing giveaways and addressing citizens, but standing behind the stand in the photo, and at a distance of 30 cm, so without any distance, Mr. Lauterbach - as the only person without a mask. As Ms. Merkel said: There are citizens who consider themselves invulnerable.

Update shortly before publication: Göttingen takes action. In terms of vaccination. "Requests" for vaccinations are already hanging on the entrances of rented apartments. Unvaccinated people will soon be chasing after so-called vaccination pilots, with a syringe in their hand.
