What kind of message do we have to hear from the RKI today? An incidence of 300 is expected by Easter? That can't be, when Ms. Merkel and the experienced Prime Minister's team, Mr. Braun and Obertrumpf Scholz discussed everything and initiated the way in which the pandemic will continue. It can't be any other way, if necessary just change the RKI card a bit and simply make it greener in color. Oh, is the card already changed? That's right, because for many days I have been observing the play of colors between red and dark red. The areas with an incidence of 200 and above are actually dark red. But strangely enough, not all of them. Shouldn't the map look so dark, we've had that long enough. Perhaps this is one of the reasons why, shortly after the MPK Brandenburg, the decision was made to increase the "all-reversing" incidence from 100 to 200, then you simply have more time to consult.

This is probably what the district administrator of the Elbe - Elsters district also thought, as it currently has an incidence value of almost 160. Despite the decisions to go back to March 7th, "we" made a different decision, according to the district administrator. He left who "we" is. Instead of distributing fines to individual citizens in cities, where there is no risk of contagion in the open air, fines may be necessary here. Because nothing is known about a medical or virological training at the district administrator. But in the meantime the anti lockdown virus is spreading to other federal states: Even the NRW Minister of Health Laumann no longer wants to automatically go back when the 100th mark is exceeded, they want to discuss the whole thing first. I wonder why the prime ministers are wasting 9 hours when everyone does what they want afterwards anyway. But talk smartly at the press conference like Ms. Merkel, an emergency brake had been installed for safety. You'd better take it from some politicians in Germany, it's about time. Incidentally, I do not see any partial recommendations for the future from Mr Laschet in the case of such excesses.

Unfortunately, even when vaccinating, dark clouds appear in the sky: In some countries, AstraZeneca is currently not being vaccinated any further due to side effects that have yet to be clarified. In addition, there is the news that this vaccine will probably only reach the EU in a shortened delivery quantity. All calculations by Spahn and Co. for the distribution of vaccinations should probably be revised, what does the Spahn Scheuer task force actually say about this, they wanted to ensure that; Merkel promised. Oh no, those were the test officers, Krupp from the SPD, Scholz his best friend, is responsible for it. But it still doesn't work.

And on the subject of side effects, I want to say something again now, because I can no longer hear the assurances and trivializations. Whenever there are any serious problems after a vaccination, experts can quickly be found who blame the whole thing on age or previous illnesses. Is it too inconvenient to tell the truth? In this context, I cannot believe the President of the Paul Ehrlich Institute in Germany when he says that the whole thing at AstraZeneca has to do with previous illnesses or underlying diseases, not with the vaccine. Eat clearly: 3 young people, completely healthy, all together have unknown previous illnesses and all 3 get a blood clot at the same time. The bad thing about this statement: The cases have not yet been investigated in Norway, so how does the President know that it is not the vaccine? Ready made opinion or what? The EMA, on the other hand, wants to add 2 side effects to the list of side effects of the vaccine: anaphylaxis (which in the worst case can mean the death of the test subject) and hypersensitivity reactions.

And another piece of news I think is funny from the world of vaccine distribution in the EU. Like many German politicians, v.d.Leyen and other political EU heads are propagating how right it was to order the vaccine together, to stand together, you can only fight and defeat the pandemic together and blah blah blah. Now it is known that some EU countries are probably more equal than others. The coordinated vaccine distribution, which Spahn also sells to us again and again, is probably not adhered to in many cases. Special arrangements, additional orders, EU countries repeatedly go on their own stalking and thus secure additional contingents, which in the worst case, as with AstraZeneca, lead to shortened deliveries to the EU because not enough can be delivered for all orders. The entire distribution plan has probably got into trouble, some EU countries are the losers, including some that actually need the vaccine more urgently than others due to the incidence figures. But the EU countries are not that close, propaganda has never helped in practice. But if you believe in it, belief moves mountains, but no vaccine.

Good news from Göttingen: Although the state government of Lower Saxony has still not delivered the promised free tests for the citizens, the city has provided for itself. From Monday there will even be free appointments at the currently only free test center directly at the train station every 5 minutes. Interesting in this context are the prices that have to be paid if more than 1 test per week is requested. 25 euros are due for each rapid test and 80 euros for each PCR test. Registration is easy and problem-free via the Internet after entering some personal data. There are also 34 medical practices in Göttingen that also carry out tests. However, I cannot say anything about how appointments are made there and whether you get an appointment as a non-patient of the doctor. But things are progressing.
