2 daily news about Corona go through the media: On the one hand, Prime Minister Söder, known for the greatest possible security, lockdown and distance, is in quarantine. Because State Chancellor Herrmann is Corona positive, and all first-degree contact persons have to be in quarantine for 10 days. Christmas in a small circle, very small, I would say. It would be just enough for New Year's Eve if he didn't get a positive test. And nobody wishes that. The 2nd message: A mutation of the coronavirus is on the way. More contagious than ever, the UK is virtually in total lockdown.

It's Christmas in two days, but the voices around the prohibitions of the meetings have largely fallen silent, because every day new highs of infections, new deaths, new bad news overtake us. Even if one or the other does not believe the numbers that there is anything true about them, the vast majority of the population have understood. Others only when it affects them. But now this: A mutation of the coronavirus, which was reported about weeks ago, has now become an issue for Germany too, albeit late in January 2020. But why react early, you have learned something new (I don't mean something new) from the spring, first of all the problem has to be big in order to deal with it. Like back then: first a Webasto employee, then several at the plant, and then here and there and suddenly a topic in the media, then the federal government and the population.

But the mutation doesn't really worry anyone at the moment. Spahn even says that this mutation has not yet been confirmed by tests in Germany and probably not yet in Germany. No, of course not, he knows the outer borders of Great Britain and that's where things stop. How simple-minded is he anyway. Of course he's been in Germany a long time ago. But who knows what about the mutation, I don't mean guesswork, but something certain? None. Where it is not even known to this day how long the vaccinations will help against the normal Corona, but everyone already agrees that the protection will not be permanent, but similar to the flu virus. Means: From a few weeks to a few months; maybe if all goes well. And since everyone has to be vaccinated twice anyway, it will be a run to the vaccination stations. In chaos Germany, I imagine it to be like this: While the first vaccinated are already receiving the 3rd dose because the first two have lost their effect, those in front of the vaccination stations meet citizens who are still completely vaccinated. Due to the lack of vaccine 1 Biontech, there is a choice of vaccine 2 - 4, sometimes one has a choice, sometimes you just pick one or the other. Well, congratulations. And the long-term consequences in summer 2021.

And about the flight bans from Great Britain to Germany and 5 other EU countries that have been in effect since Sunday, I can only say: Once again, what is being done is completely inadequate. Instead of completely sealing off at this wedding of contagions, first have a look, eat nothing happened yet. Because whether flights FROM Great Britain will be banned was not yet known. They are confident that the airlines will be informed in good time. I understand, if the health authorities are still working with fax, it will take a while. And then the busy signals forever. But the Oberhammer: The EU still has no idea what to do with the sea routes or the Eurotunnel. First of all, you want to make a joint decision, in the EU, preferably next year. The European Commission approved the vaccine on Monday. Raise your arm twice during a vote seems too difficult. What are they paid so much for?

But now we're looking ahead; The European Medicines Agency EMA has now approved Biontech's vaccine for the EU. However, the approval of the European Commission is still missing. But the information on the website of the European Commission is interesting. As of today, there was no information on the approval of the commission, but there is talk of a vaccination start on December 27-29, 2020. The fact check about the Corona vaccine and Corona is also extremely interesting, there are warnings about fakenews on the Internet. The European Commission should take a look at its website for itself.

As advocates and supporters of the vaccinations, Mr. Piot, a virologist, and Mr. Montgomery, President of the European Medical Association, will be presented via video message as opinions of experts. I do not want to doubt the competencies of these gentlemen, but rather find the number of those presented there to be a bit thin. It gets even thinner in the section "People's Opinions", where only a video of a lady by the name of Borislava Ananieva, a transplant patient, is presented. Oops, quick internet research, the lady works at the European Patient Forum in Brussels, in the secretariat. I won't say anything more about that. Right at the beginning, the vaccine is declared as safe and effective. And vaccination is life-saving. Oh, how do they in Brussels know all this, or fake news? As Mr. Lauterbach said: No, the vaccinated are not free because we cannot rule out that those who are vaccinated may continue to be infected or infect others. Doesn't sound so life-saving now.

And that in the long history of vaccines no mRNA vaccine has ever been approved or approved in practice, ask why that was the case. Nevertheless, our Research Minister Karliczek, who likes to present herself in front of the camera in Corona times and shows her great achievements, does not miss the opportunity to do so during this time. Your ministry had already accompanied the company Biontech years ago and supported it in research with extensive funds. She sees the ministry as a cornerstone for the now so successful presentation of the vaccine, the development of which could only take place thanks to your funds. I laugh my head off. What she does not say: What has been groundbreaking developed by this company in the past few years, what have the hundreds of millions of euros been used for? Nobody knew the company before summer 2020, the company was in the basement and only incurred heavy losses as an AG. Karliczek applied thick again.

Union politicians and the CSU have now revealed a really great idea, the online package inner city fund. Yes, that's the name. This means: if you order something on the Internet, there is a surcharge due to the order value, because whoever is supposed to pay. This is then collected and used for downtown businesses that are disadvantaged due to online trading. Who then gets how much, calculate the same beasts of intelligence that have already calculated the 75% for each company without taking into account the saved costs, so all nonsense. I just hope that the online retailers will take this apart in the courts when it comes up. But I don't think so, there are many politicians who are underutilized during Corona.

Finally, a little joy again: We invite you to come for New Year's Eve. Where ? Well to Lower Saxony. All German citizens come to Lower Saxony, the island of bliss, at least when it comes to bangs and rockets on New Year's Eve. That is possible with us, the Lower Saxony. All of them all come here. And where do you get the firecrackers and the other stuff? No problem, you simply order online from Lidl: Until December 27th. you can easily order your pop and pyros range on the Internet this year and receive it on December 30th. Pick up at a branch of your choice. Is not that great ? So now order quickly, the order lists are almost full. Who doesn't want to use this great new pick-up service that was specially introduced due to Corona? And maybe there is a lard bread with gurkli or a hot sausage at the Lidl entrance. 2021 can come. Enjoy the meal.
