

Corona News 07/23/2021 Contagion rates rise Intelligence falls

What's new in the Corona scene. Nothing special, you could say. Except maybe that the number of infections is increasing. In Germany still moderate, in some EU countries exorbitant. Spain and the Netherlands, for example. Scratches at the 400th mark. And Britain? The value of 500 is almost reached. And France? With an incidence of around 150, it still has a comparatively moderate number, but extremely high values with currently over 20,000 new infections every day. But it does not matter. The vaccinations are progressing, in some countries over 50% have already been vaccinated twice, they have nothing to do with the incidence figures. It is claimed. No intelligence is required to make such claims. Much more intelligence is required to see through the dirty game of the federal government, some media and experts. They openly and bluntly declare the unvaccinated to be the guilty party, they would spread the virus. Hence the increasing numbers. Very stupid and wrong explanation. Because the facts are completely different:

First of all: All the unvaccinated people who have not received a Corona in 16 months have done everything right and followed all the rules. In some cases this does not seem to be the case with vaccinated or so-called convalescents, because only those who do not comply with the rules or are careless, and we had and have enough of them, they become infected and are then convalescent. This is not a saintly term, as some believe. And that both recovered and vaccinated people can still transport viruses, can even become infected with invisible symptoms and then even pose a much greater danger to the general public because this group of people is visibly more casual and irregular, and many rules do not apply but known. And besides, we know that the measures that the federal government has introduced in terms of easing are making a significant contribution to increasing the numbers again. Football events, cinemas, pubs, everything is possible again. The difference to the last time is only one: This time nobody is interested in increasing numbers anymore, because now the story goes on like this: Those who get vaccinated well, who don't are left to their own devices and also to blame if they get sick. The federal government only offers one supposed protection: vaccination. Take or die, that seems to be the motto.

And it is clear that traveling freely will bring additional infections to Germany. The opening of schools also brings higher numbers again. Because we also know: ventilation systems have long been installed everywhere. Some slept there. And let's look at the incidence figures for 15 - 24 year olds, there is the highest value of currently 32. Why do you think so? Because they live their lives as they want, finished off. Because they have depression and psychological problems. Yes, and of a special kind. The state government of Lower Saxony is also threatening to reintroduce restrictive measures in Hanover and the surrounding area. Because here the incidence is more than twice as high as elsewhere, and here, too, it is evident that, especially in the area of young people, the incidence is, what a coincidence, the highest values. And what about Prof. Streeck, one of the leading REAL experts in virology? Says exactly that, and sees an overestimation of vaccination protection against infection. The vaccine protects against a severe course and does not offer any third-party protection. All the talk of herd immunity, which Lauterbach has propagated again in the last few weeks, that the children are needed, etc., could not be achieved with this vaccine. He sees the loosening or the abolition of the rules despite rising and high numbers of infections in Great Britain as a dangerous experiment. He also sees a risk of spreading in the flood disaster areas in Germany. But he thinks a vaccination against tetanus makes more sense there. Logical, because by the time unvaccinated people there have effectively received their 2 vaccinations against Corona, the drama is long over there.

And when I keep hearing about the great concepts against corona infections, which have been revised over and over again and are so great, I can no longer hear that shit. When it comes to football in particular, the DFB and DFL have made several statements and propagated the new concepts. What good is that if players don't stick to it? How else can massive player failures in the 2nd and 3rd Bundesliga due to infections and quarantine be explained? Obviously, some football players think they are better or particularly strong and continue to do what they want. Visitors to a music club in Hamburg had probably also thought of what you want. Here, too, extremely high security concepts were advertised in advance in order to be able to carry out the event. It didn't help, now 800 visitors are in quarantine. Well done.

There is also something new on the subject of fraud and corona. What we already know with mask deals, mask sales and spending in pharmacies and fake test numbers, now a new scandal in matters of digital vaccination certificates is on the table. In addition to the fact that people who were not vaccinated at all received a digital certificate without data control, it is now possible to register a non-existent pharmacy on a corresponding company server and then to produce certificates. The end of this fraud: As of yesterday, pharmacies are no longer allowed to issue certificates. For now. Until this gap is closed. But that doesn't mean that as of today there are no more forged certificates in circulation. After all. And there are always some added. On the one hand, the app has no way of deleting forged certificates; on the other hand, a practice that has become known in the Gifhorn district is said to have issued a large number of fake vaccination cards. Mind you, a doctor's office. Commercial fraud is the official accusation, it was probably about nice sums of money. And who seriously believes that it was the only nationwide practice that did it? I laugh my head off.

And there is also something new for the India variant. New things, you can't really say that, secret things that are now coming to light, I should say better. Because so far the propaganda has always been valid: The India variant is much more contagious, but mostly not as dangerous and has less severe courses. For weeks. Now it is said that a Canada study shows very clearly that this variant is also more deadly in the course than previously said. But what does the Canada study have more to offer in terms of credibility than the UK study, which was then used from evidence that the variant is more contagious, but less dangerous? And when will a new study appear that throws everything upside down again? How stupid and untrustworthy some news are is also shown by a well-known German national daily newspaper, which on June 29 published an article with the headline (quote): Hammer study on Moderna and Biontech - years of protection after vaccination (end of quote). The same Bild newspaper publishes the article on July 9th (quote): Biontech announces - third dose needed earlier (end of quote). And just like these two examples, the way in which the federal government provides information is drawn to the citizens; the longer the pandemic lasts, the more contradicting information there is. But everything can be justified. Spahn: We learn new things every day; Seibert: We always only report facts and transparently.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the health conference, Holetschek, points out the immense costs of the free corona tests and advocates that those who do not want to be vaccinated should soon pay for the test themselves. Is his opinion, but completely uninteresting. First, I don't get vaccinated because the test is supposed to cost money. Second, I would just not take another test. The stupid would be all those who come together with me during the day, and I as an infected person in between, but don't know myself either. He didn't win anything there. And I don't go where tests are still necessary. And an employer MUST offer the test free of charge if asked to do so. As simple as that.

By the way: Even if there is hardly any or no reports in this direction, the WHO is allegedly still looking for the outbreak of the corona pandemic, or at least that's what it claims. How it still wants to find out after 18 months is not explained to me . And it won't be in the near future either, because China has initially banned the WHO's research efforts to visit a laboratory in Wuhan. One has probably been slightly to moderately annoyed about the statement "laboratory leak excluded prematurely". One could have expressed it a little more soulfully. Apart from that, there doesn't have to be an accident, Resident Evil sends his regards.

And one more final word on the Tokyo 2020 Olympic Games that start today, which have been postponed to this year due to Corona. No spectators, at the opening, which is currently on, only a few state guests and their representatives present, a few officials, a few media, that's almost it. It should be around 600 people. All well and good, and actually the Olympics is and always was an event worth seeing. Still, we don't need to fool ourselves; As nice as the participation from all over the world is, the concept of corona security is great - Olympia will be a corona distribution center, if not during the games, then after the athletes have returned home. Unfortunately.

And here is a translation table for everyone who does not understand the names of the current Corona variants:

B. 117 Alpha Great Britain

B16172 Delta India

B 1351 South Africa

AA 1 worldwide (standard corona) maybe China
