What has taken place at Corona Demos in Germany in the last 7 days shows me very clearly that many citizens obviously have nothing to do and therefore prefer to take to the streets. And then many demo participants wonder twice, and do not even notice that they are to blame for the misery: They demonstrate against the mask requirement, against distance and against even more lockdowns, in short against ever more restrictions on freedom, which also includes the go hand in hand with the new Infection Protection Act. Few of them adhere to these same rules during the demos, namely wearing masks and keeping your distance and thus contributing to a spread that then brings even more restrictions and rules that nobody wants. They just do not notice that they will not break the vicious circle with this kind of attitude and some already believe quite correctly, I also believe that from Wednesday evening even tougher rules and the existing rules will apply for even longer, also thanks to the demos who break all the rules. And the second point hits exactly in that notch. I constantly see videos on TikTok, Instagram, Twitter and also YouTube. The video shooters cannot outdo each other there in terms of alleged police violence inflicted on individual citizens at the demos. Exactly the same nonsense as the other: The demos were broken up by the police for disregarding the rules, nobody leaves the demo, the police take action. And when some women think that they have a special status if they intervene in a police measure and are then surprised that the police are also attacking hard here, turn on the brain then act. Anyone who disrupts or hinders police measures will be approached accordingly. Quite normal and deserved. Point. And the violations seem to be normal now, whether several times in Berlin or Leipzig, in Frankfurt or also in Duisburg, where the demo was not even approved.

While we're on the subject of wearing masks, both SPD and CDU politicians have spoken out in favor of an extension or tightening of mask wear in the run-up to the Prime Minister's round. Ms. Dreyer put it in a nutshell: What doesn't work without a mask cannot take place. We already know that there are people who are also damaging society in other ways in times of Corona, among other things, an extremely large number of frauds with the aid funds are currently pending in the courts for clarification, but many have also after the tightening of the reporting requirement for return travelers just don't feel like giving their details. It is not at all about pleasure here, but it is an obligation to be fulfilled, when do some people finally get that in their brains? What surprises me, however: Supposedly, the data should be collected by the federal police during the ID check so that false information is excluded, but obviously the federal police are overwhelmed with this and only make random checks afterwards. In the period of 10 days in November around 15,000 data collections were carried out, of which almost 3000 were partially or completely incorrect. I beg your pardon ?

Hackers, too, have now found a lucrative business: breaking into hospital computers, changing data and only releasing it with a ransom. The number has now doubled from last year to this year, and the successes are also increasing dramatically. I can only say: Anyone who endangers life through hacker attacks in such vital facilities because data is temporarily inaccessible should be subject to the greatest severity of the state.

In the last report I mentioned that the authorities had approved a two seat reservation for civil servants in railways for their safety. After a lot of excitement from various sides, the regulation is currently suspended, but not lifted. Rather, one thinks about the enforceability with the train, since the train had claimed that a reservation would expire 15 minutes after departure of the train if the seat was not taken. Let's see what ideas are still coming from the federal offices.

Meanwhile, the rumors and reports about the Corona vaccine continue. Allegedly, Biontech and Pfizer have applied for emergency approval in the USA, and if the health authorities cooperate, a first vaccination should be possible as early as the middle of the 2nd week of December. For Germany, between 60 - 70% of the population should be vaccinated by autumn 2021, according to the company owner. We expect that too, because Germany has finally invested 375 million euros in the Biontech company in terms of research, but the application for initial approval in the USA is still being made. Hear hear. One more company from Great Britain joins the ranks of vaccine providers: The AstraZeneca company is said to be on the verge of a breakthrough, the last study is still pending. Let's see what's coming. Meanwhile, Ms. Karliczek is already spreading her calming campaign for the citizens in Germany: Yes, the vaccine will meet all safety standards and will be constantly monitored, no, of course there will be no compulsory vaccination. A vaccination campaign will inform citizens in good time about the process. Thank God, because as Mr. Seibert always says: The Federal Government always provides transparent information and only provides facts. So let's wait and see. But not all politicians seem to act so transparently and factually. As has now become known, Bundestag Vice President Roth has informed some MPs of their misconduct in a letter, saying that they did not go into quarantine at home despite contact people who had tested positive; others continued to be in their fully occupied offices without knowing the test result for themselves. In the Bundestag, too, there is an admonition here and there to put on a mask, especially when entering or leaving the hall. Just recently, Ms Roth personally gave a member of parliament a new mask after she had pointed out to him that he was wearing an unsuitable, holey mask.

Meanwhile, large companies have again commented on possible further restrictions or extensions of the corona protection measures. The head of Galeria Karstadt Kaufhof warns that there is no question of a complete closure again, the inner cities are already emptier than usual. Well, Mr. Müllenbach, why is that? Perhaps because of the new mask requirement in many cities now also in public, where shopping is no longer fun? At real, who were recently under discussion about the break-up, the buy-out and now about problems with the takeover, at least the employees can't complain: During the corona phases, when full work was required, they received two 100 euro vouchers from the group management , and now a third one worth 150 euros is to be added; a recognition for the special achievement, which employees of many other companies can only dream of getting recognition at all.

Since the corona measures will certainly drag on into next year, new funds will be required to support those in need. Initial considerations have now been made to allow civil servants and the self-employed to be paid into statutory coffers. Especially because the self-employed are now also benefiting from corona aid from the funds that they never paid into. That is why Scholz and Altmaier released a further 22 billion euros for these groups about a week ago, now Scholz is talking about the fact that the planned new debts of 98 billion euros for the next year would probably not be enough, now 160 billion euros are under discussion. Hopefully he has also considered the costs for the vaccines, setting up the vaccination centers, staff, freezers, everything that goes with it, plus the funding for the countries that cannot afford the substances, the material for storage, etc. There will be more Various billions are added, because nobody will give away the vaccine. Have you already noticed: With all the euphoria, no one has yet published figures of the costs per vaccine dose, there is probably another hammer coming. There are enough guesses against it.

And a positive message at the end: Despite the grumbling of the economy, the so-called economic methods have committed themselves: The economy will not be as bad as it was feared and widespread, the bad figures of the financial crisis of 2008 will not be topped. Please go on.
