Today, as agreed, the agreements on Corona protection between the Prime Ministers of the federal states and the federal government were discussed and partially tightened by video conference. The reason for this is the currently rapidly increasing number of new infections in Europe, the resulting ever increasing numbers in Germany, especially because of more and more rule violations at private parties, trips, events of all kinds and of course the coming autumn and winter, where the numbers anyway increase due to the weather. The resolution includes the following changes:

As has already been introduced for some time, when visiting restaurants, public buildings such as courts, events and bars, complete personal and contact information must be left at the entrance, which in the event of a corona outbreak of a person who was present there, the corresponding contact can be informed and tested on the same day at the same time or at the same time, so that new infections can be detected quickly and further spread avoided. In the near future there has been an increasing number of incorrect entries or gaps in the entries. This negligence or indifference is now punished with a fine of at least 50 euros. The restaurant operators and the staff are required to, in the event of discrepancies, B. to check the plausibility of the data.

A C and an L are added to the well-known AHA rule for distance, hygiene and everyday mask-wearing, in which the government and the ministers attach great importance. C means use the Corona Warn App, L means regular burst ventilation in all private and public rooms in order to avoid possible concentrations. A funding program amounting to 500 million euros for 2020 and 2021 is intended to help reduce retrofitting costs for ventilation and air conditioning systems in rooms where ventilation is not possible. In the school operation, the ventilation should be supported by regular CO2 measurements.

The measures will be continued as decided on August 27, 2020 until new test strategies are available. The following new test strategy should then also contain regulations on the new rapid test procedure. Since September 28, new exit card controls for arriving travelers have been carried out by the federal police. Travel in the autumn holidays to risk areas should be avoided, so the urgent appeal of the Prime Minister and the Chancellor to all citizens. Due to the flu epidemic due to the wintertime and the associated increased disease rate, so-called fever clinics are being set up, special consultation hours and specialty practices are being set up to ease the situation. In order to avoid double infections, the RKI urgently recommends influenza vaccination for population groups at particular risk; this includes seniors from the age of 60, people with chronic underlying diseases, pregnant women, residents in old people's and care facilities as well as medical staff and those who are particularly exposed at work. The health service is an important factor in public safety in terms of pandemic, tracking and containment. That is why the federal government will help the federal states to create a total of 5,000 additional jobs in this area with EUR 4 billion by 2026.

Due to the growing number of new infections in Germany, also regionally, additional general restrictions on public life must be reintroduced in the event of a regional outbreak and unclear or incomprehensible chains of infection. Due to the strong assessment of the increasing numbers at private parties, the number of people participating in public or rented rooms is limited to a maximum of 50 participants, in private rooms no more than 25 people should be present. These rules apply to a 7-day value of at least 35 infected people / 100,000 inhabitants. From 50 infected people / 100,000 inhabitants, further measures must be taken; a maximum of 25 people public / rented rooms, max. 10 people in private rooms. Due to the possible re-expansion of the serious course of the disease, the federal states have to take on the task of monitoring and controlling intensive care capacities.

So much for the statements made by the state leaders and the federal government. Interesting in this context is a supplementary statement by the Prime Minister of Thuringia, which I would like to quote here in the original: Thuringia requires a federal regulation that guest lists arranged in restaurants may only be used for infection protection. (Note: There are well-considered and well-known measures behind the fact that this request was made. That gives me pause.

On other corona issues. As is well known, a major coronavirus outbreak occurred in Hamm due to several weddings, because various rules were probably too lax or simply not adhered to at all. But the news that several guests simply do not want to participate in the investigation by not disclosing their contact details blows me away: Obviously the police and / or the public order office are not in a position to enforce laws and rules, or it may be at the big Turkish wedding? Probably fear of clan or other acts of revenge, we are that far. Why do we have the police to determine personal data? The police will ask for ID for every banal violation, and here? I can't believe whether this is stupidity, inability, or both. Lt. City spokesmen are now around 2500 people in quarantine, 11 schools are affected, 800 students have to stay at home, 54 children are sick. A fine for the organizer and possibly a bride and groom is under discussion. I laugh my head off. In this context I must point out the content of a video that is currently running on NTV. A Dr. Tin shown in an interview with NTV, director of the Bioscientia hygiene center, who is being asked about corona issues.

Today, the moderator refers to private parties, among other things, and asks whether a ban on alcohol could not help in this context, since one would often get closer to one another after consuming it and everything would be uninhibited. The answer from Dr. Zinn: Some countries have already done that, alcohol is already banned in South Africa.... Oh, I'm glad that we also look to South Africa in Corona times, we already have the people here.

And Söder has another great idea as well: The Corona traffic light. This shows the drama of the infection, or the number, or what I know, in a region. You don't believe it: there is green, yellow and red. By the way, Berlin has been around for a while. And the effect: none. Because no matter what color the traffic lights in Berlin have shown so far regarding Corona, special measures have not always been taken; In practice this means: Despite the red light, the whole thing was reduced to one operation and everything continued as before. Whether traffic lights, numbers, arrows, exclamation marks, or just the colors gray, green, orange and red, as before, it is not important how you display something, but how you react. But Söder has not yet understood that, nor does he anymore. Like others, the best example is Laschet. See my last reports. The same folk stupidity as with the nominal value of the value of the contagion numbers, which has already been changed 3 times.

Finally, another message from the Witzbold and Co. area, distributed on NTV Online today: Laschet does not want any controls in private apartments in the Corona pandemic to determine how many people are there. How generous of him. I have to wonder what Laschet actually thinks he can order? Controls in private apartments WITHOUT suspicion at celebrations and Co.? He's probably dreaming of. But only that. The state shouldn't determine that, he continues. The state doesn't have to determine that, I say. How dare he pretend that he and the government are generous enough not to do this? So slowly everyone turns from here. We still have intensive care beds available, Mr. Laschet.
